Modes of "Personality" for more Mature Figures

(Sizes 38 to 44)

We are so enthusiastic about the modes for more mature figures-created especially for us by leading designers-that we urge every woman of larger size to see them, even though she has no thought of purchasing at this time.

Clever adaptations of "frills" and "fancies"—so necessary in the achievement of style and personality, yet heretofore regarded as impossible for larger women-has resulted in Frocks and Gowns, of charm, combined with the slenderizing effect larger women need.

Naturally this new department will not affect our presentations for youthful figures. But the same studious selection-always typical of KERMANS—is now available for women of more generous proportions.

And following our well known policy, the pricings on these larger modes will be low, considering their quality and authen-

Qushman's Oriental Rugs

Are Worth Every Penny They Cost

We have just been rearranging insurance on our household goods and have had our Oriental Rugs appraised. We have only two left of the original purchase made of you, as Mrs. Daugharty has found it necessary, as we have changed our residence from time to time, to exchange our rugs for others usually of a larger size.

I am sure that it will be of interest to you to know that whenever we have made an exchange, we have secured a value twice a great as we paid you, or more. You will perhaps remember the Kernansha Rug that we bought for our library when we moved to Barry Ave., for which we paid something less than $\tilde{c}$ 1000. It has just been appraised by $\vert \tilde{c}$. $\vert \tilde{c}$. J. Sloame and a valuation of $\vert \tilde{c}$ 5000 placed upon it. It certainly is a beautiful rug and one that is adrired by all of our friends, and Mrs. Daugharty and I felt that you would be interested in knowing just how the rug had worn and developed.

Daugharty joins so, I am, dear sir,

Yours very sincerely,

We do not see wherein Mr. Insull's new proposals are necessarily inimical to the city's program. The new lines and extensions could be taken over by the city when it has negotiated the transfer of the present properties. They could be built on a cost plus agreement, and the city ought to be able to assure itself that a fair deal was to be had. We do not suppose the assumption is that it is simply impossible for the city to deal with Mr. Insull without getting the worst of it. because in that case why have any negotiations to go to school, because they have to go, anyway.

A WORTHY CANDIDATE FOR A

Since the father's death, this motherand her bealth was none too good—has, with her hands and her brain, for there was no money, graduated two of these children from technical universities in the east, one with highest honors; has two more who are juniors in college; has just graduated one from high school; has two more in high school, one a freshman; has seen two depart for mission pelds to foreign lands, and has the others working and waiting their turn for college. And aside from her own immediate family and a very small circle of close friends, no one has known of the strugg's.

Of course, a jury would not select her as the one who has contributed most to human progress—at least not in twelve months—for she has not taken much part in politics, although at one time she was asked to give permission for her name to he put up for a board of education. Neither has she done much in the way of social reform, medicine, law, or any of the other things that will appeal to the jury as "human progress."

PARIS HATS

And Our Own Recently Completed Reproductions of Paris Models

THE first arrival of Paris Hats is always a fascinating part of the season's beginning and serves as a sort of delightful inauguration of all the new styles. Many of the newest models from prominent Paris houses are now displayed in the French and Debutante Salon, and are thoroughly interesting for their individuality as well as for their chic lines and trimmings.

Also displayed are a number of our own copies of French Hats, developed in the finest of materials. One of them is illustrated above—a hand-sewn Milan straw with a drape and cockade of blue velvet ribbon in an unusual shade.

WITH fur standing as one of the most sought-after Trim-mings in spring fashions, it has taken on new qualities and definitely adapted itself to the colors and fabrics of the mode. Impartially it appears on Coats, Frocks and Suits in its smartest adaptations. A number of the more novel Trimmings in several widths are listed here:

Wraps for Afternoon

WRAPS for afternoon and more formal occasions tend toward a simplicity of style and line but a complexity of details. New braids and embroidery are in wide use and the linings are gaily individual, often with stripes of contrasting color which give a bright bizarre effect. This particular Coat illustrated at the right is of navy charmeen extremely fine in quality. Bands of summer ermine are used to trim the smart narrow collar and half way 'round the cuffs—a distinctive minor detail. The seams are bound with black grosgrain and the back of the coat is formed by three tiers.

CHICAGO TOPICS Our Boulevards

THE fame of Chicago's boulevard system is known to all the world and is emulated in all modern city planning. The wise conservers of Chicago's landscape beauty originated the plan whereby the city is intersected and girdled by asphalt and contrete roadways. This plan has been elaborated until today there are seventy-seven miles of ornamental thoroughfare.

These drives are designed to interlock so that one may, without leaving them, encircle the city. An expansion of the boulevard system to effect numerous connections with the Forest Preserve is now in progress.

Are you one of thousands waiting for such a Burner? Are you shoveling coal and ashes, and enduring uneven heat, until you see a successful Oil Burner?

The Secret of Burning Oil

Perhaps you have looked at many Burners, in an effort to get away from the drudgery and dirt of coal.

And wherever you looked you found only a difference in details—a little different nozzle, or a new valve.

The secret of burning oil is the secret of atomization. The smaller the particle of oil surrounded by air, the more thorough the combustion, the greater the heat, and the quieter the operation.

Pascoe's Wonderful Invention

Mild weather is coming, when heat will be wanted for only a few hours at a time. Let us show you how the Pascoe Burner will do it perfectly. Finish the winter without shoveling dirty coal and ashes. Get in touch with us now.

NEW BEDFORD . BOSTON . WORCESTER . SPRINGFIELD The beaten path of successful advertising in Massachusetts

SALES executives and advertising managers know the impor-tance of planning carefully in selecting newspapers and rout-ing salesman to cover Massachusetts. Among its twenty-seven cities of more than 25,000 population they know that there are actually four primary markets—Boston, Worcester, Spring-field and New Bedford.

It is less generally known that New Bedford stands first among these four in the percentage of home-owning families, and that one newspaper—The Standard Mercury—dominates this prosperous market as no other New England city of 100,000 people can be influenced by a single newspaper.

Three Things to Remember about Balloon Tires

1. Balloon Tires require a change of rheels and rims, if you are now using tandard size high-pressure tires.

2. For the man who does not want to nge wheels and rims, the United Str sims. These tires provide appro-palloon tire performance. Some facturers call them Balloon Tires.

3. Unquestionably, accurately balanced Balloon and Balloon-Type Tires are here to stay. However, with about fourteen

Answering Some Questions That Every Car Owner is Asking About Balloon Tires

O development in the tire industry has awakened so much interest as the advent of the Balloon Tire.

The obvious advantages in increased comfort and decreased wear and sear on the car that result from riding on tires pumped up soft instead of almost rock-hard have appealed to everyone.

questions to ask.

He is in danger of being confused. A dozen tire makers are bidding for his business.

There has been a good bit of conflicting talk about Balloon Tires, Balloon - Type Tires, and Semi-Balloon Tires.

But not many clean-cut facts that he could tie to when he wanted to know what it was all about.

The U.S. Rubber Company is in a position to state the facts.

It has developed its Balloon Tire program carefully. It has avoided rushing into the market. It has gone ahead only after considering its obligations both to car man-ufacturers and the present owners of cars. It has refused to experiment at the expense of either. The Balloon Tire principle is right. It is here to stay.

But there is a vast difference in the way the principle is applied-whether it be in the larger cross-section Balloon Tire for 20, 21 and 22 inch rims, or in the smaller crosssection Balloon-Type Tires to fit wheels and rims on cars now in use.

The United States Rubber Company manufactures both. They are 4-ply flexible side-wall low air pressure tires. Both have greatly advanced principles of design, construction, and balance. Web-Cord is used in the manufacture of both.

The matter of balance in a Balloon Tire is of the utmost importance. The advantage of Web-Cord in Balloon and Balloon-Type Tires is even more pronounced than in standard high-pressure tires.

Web-Cord is the strongest, most resilient most flexible tire fabric ever developed. It contains no cross-tie threads. There is no chafing action when the tire flexes over ruts and bumps. Each individual cord is saturated, impregnated, surrounded and bound to every other cord by pure rubber latex.

U. S. Royal Cord Balloon Tire The U.S. Royal Cord Balloon Tire is the nearest approach to the ideal tire. A tire that is thin and flexible, yet as strong as seed. And, what is all important, it is accurately

In high-pressure tires balance has meant a tire in which both tread and carcass were so constructed as to work together and wear evenly-a tire with no weakest link.

In a Balloon Tire it not only means this, but it means balanced as to weight. A varia-tion of ½ lb. in the distribution of weight in a high-pressure tire is not important. Being pumped up hard, the tire and wheel act as a unit.

But in a big, soft, cushion-like tire, such as a Balloon Tire, this matter of even distribu tion of weight is of the utmost importance. A slight variation makes a noticeable difference in the operation of a car.

32 x 41/4 8. S. 32 x 6.20 S. S. 33 x 5.77 S. S. 33 x 41/4 = 33 x 6.20 = 34 x 5.77 = 34 x 41/4 = 33 x 6.20 = 35 x 5.77 =

33 x 5 " 34x7.30 " 35x6.60 "

The engineers of the United States Rubbes Company have achieved accurate balance in the U.S. Balloon Tire.

Accurate balance does away with any tendency on the part of the car to gallop or wobble, Cars which are difficult to drive at high speeds on some Balloon Tires can be handled with ease and safety on Royal Cord

U.S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires, like all other full Balloon Tires, require a change of wheels and rims when fitted to cars equipped with high-pressure tires.

U. S. Royal Cord Balloon-Type Tire The U.S. Royal Cord Balloon-Type Tire is built to fit existing wheels and rims.

It fits present wheel equipment perfectly ithout interference with fenders, frame

This tire is slightly smaller in cross-sec-tion than the Balloon Tire, but gives effective balloon cushioning because it is of flexible side-wall construction and, like the Balloon Tire, is built to run on low air

The unusual strength of Web-Cord makes it possible to hold to four-ply Balloon Tire construction in this smaller cross section Balloon-Type Tire, thus providing for the owners of present cars the advantages of the Balloon Tire principle.

It is possible and practical for car owners to run U.S. Royal Cord Balloon-Type Tires on rear wheels with regular high-pressure tires on the front. But to get the full advantage of these tires, all four wheels should be fitted with them.

depart for Seigenagaw. Bafore they went down to the cance he saw Jim talking to their Indians and then to The Spider, who sat on his bench outside. Once the brigade was away Rod turned his whole attention to watching The Spider's movements and guarding against any sort of attack. A day later the Mattawa Indians arrived with the supplies ordered to take the place of those that had been destroyed. Rod had counted on their being too late for the fall outsiting, but Cron evidently had exerted influence somewhere to get a quick shipment from the east.

The Mattawa Indians left for the west the next day. Jim and Bapinini remaining with Cron. The families of most of the hunters also departed for Seigenagaw, leaving only three or four wigwams at the head of the bay.

The usual August quiet settled over Lake Deception. Each year the post was deserted thus while the Indians were gathering rice, but now, though the everything was calm on the surface, there was a tenseness never before known. Rod was after every moment, spending hours each day watching The Spider's post and the movements of his two assistants. Each night he and Henry remained on guard, waiting for a possible attack or an effort to burn the buildings. In view of the murder of his father and the attempt to murder him, he knew Cron would not heedtate at anything, that he was now desperate erfough even to make open warfare of it.

It was this that Rod prayed for, because only through drastic action on The Spider's part was it possible to bring a quick termination of the struggle. But nothing happened. No one came near the post at night. Jim and Bapinini seldom left the buildings across the bay, and then only on the usual fally tasks.

At the beginning Rod had known it would be impossible to deceive Bath.

"But why is he doing this?" she demanded.

"Because he is desperate," Rod told her. "He is close to bankruptcy, and believed when dad died he would have an easy time here. Now he is being ched worse than before; I am getting into him badly in his own territory, and he sees it is now or never. He knows we were in bad shape financially at spring, and he's trying to push us over the edge.

"But father and The Spider never fought this way."

"No, but The Spider threatened to, only he didn't dare with dad. He areatened to with me, and I agreed. That's why I wrecked his brigade. The areatened to with me, and I agreed. That's why I wrecked his brigade. The way to meet that sort of an attack is to hit first."

"You mean he made the threat that day he came over and I heard you alking in the trade shop?" Beth asked.

"Yes, just after I had kloked out the fake missionary."

She looked at him questioningly for a moment and then smiled.

"This is fun, Rod," she said. "What can I do to help?"

"For one thing, you can stick around the kitchen whenever any of the romen come to visit Jana." he told her. "I don't want a bit of information fany sort to leak out. And you can take your turn watching day times to two Henry and me a chance for a little aleep."

Thus it was Beth who discovered that Bapinini was not at The Spider's post.

Galli-Curci Comes Back for a Night

Gives Farewell Recital to Chicago.

BY EDWARD MOORE. Never was the loss of Amelita Galli-Curoi felt as keenly as when she gave Curci felt as keenly as when she gave her farewell recital at the Auditorium last night. Not in years has she been in such good voice, with such perfection of execution, with the golden charm of the Galli-Curci tones transfluiring every note. If you want to know how completely exquisite a song can be, you should hear her in a simple ditty, something like "Lindy Lou," one of her many encores.

This department has maintained for years, perhaps taking the unpopular view in so doing, that it is not Galli-Curcl's feats, of dazzling coloratura that make her great, but the fact of her lovely lyric voice. Other sopranos can sing coloratura, some with astonishing dexterity, but there is only one Galli-Curic voice, and that voice makes everything sound better than it did before.

The that reason one dould almost forgive her for singing Bishop's "Pretty Mockingbird" hast night, almost the only lapse in an otherwise entertaining program. Thus it was Beth who discovered that Bapinini was not at The Spider's Thus it was Beth who discovered that Bapinini was not at The Spider's set.

"I haven't seen him all day," she reported.

That night Rod learned that the half-breed had departed early in the training. The tension increased. For the first time Rod seemed worried, and magine days after their departure, his three cances arrived from Heath-lat. The loads were carried into the warehouse, but the next morning, long days daylight, they were back in the cancea. Before any one in The Spider's set could see the brigade was on its way to Black Sturgeon lake.

"That'll fool him," Rod chuckled when he and Beth had breakfast. "He as thought we had only the usual small trading outlit at the new post. Now sere'll be enough to take care of a lot of his hunters."

"If it gets there." Beth said.

"Don't worry about that," was the confident answer. "In the first place, he Spider won't know it's gone until too late. In the second, George will be that the goods are turned over to Andy Parr. And after that—well, I'm it worrying about Andy."

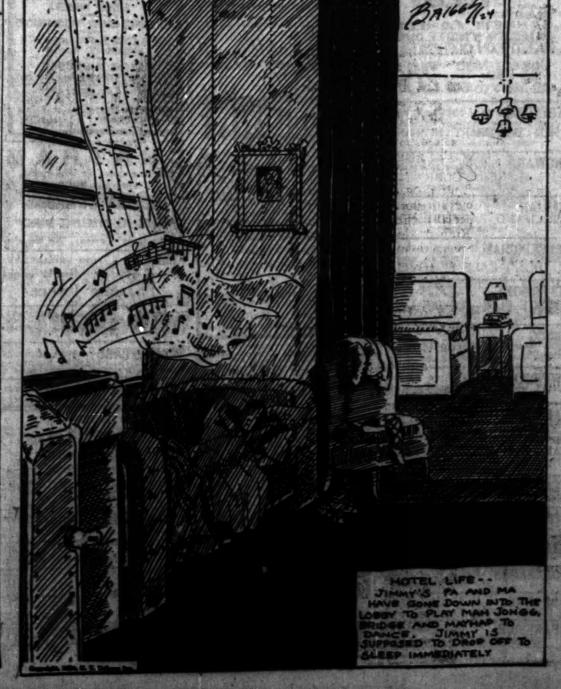

"But what is The Spider going to do?" Beth demfinded. "If he dossm't too this brigade, if he doesn't burn down the post, what can he do?"

"I don't see what there is left for him," Rod said. "I've put myself in its place time and again, and I haven't found a loophole. I think, Beth, this inter will see the end of Aaron Cron on Lake Deception."

Yet Rod Gid worry. He knew The Spider would not quit. He knew he sae planning some form of attack, but, though he increased his visilance, hough George and the Indians returned safely from Black Sturgeon, though recept half-breed acting as The Spider's assistant. George identified him as man from Mattawa.

August was almost gone. The first of the Indian families begin to traggle in from the rice harvest. Each night saw a few more wigwams at the head of the bey. Hunters and their families hung about the trade shop is increasing numbers. Rod noted with satisfaction that Jew complete.

it with roses. Tell it with bon-Tell it with pearls. Tell it with Tell it with taxis. Tell it with shows. Tell it with taxis. Tell it with plances, with gentle arm pressure, with hugs, even with kisses. Tell it under the pink shaded light of a restaurant table, or under the mistletog if you cannot curb that impulse. But, gentlemen, by the shades of the man who inquired "Who's looney now?" never not it in writing.

"Sweetums" and "Cutems" and "Daddums" and "Honeybunchems" trip lightly off the lips, and they may trip lightly off the lips, and they may be sweet to the ear. But to the eye— in a morning newspaper! Verily, the word you've never written is the one you least regret! For confirmation ask Asa G. Candler, Coco-Cola manufac-turer, who called a lady "Sweetums" just once too often in the mail!

He called her "Sweetums" and she nawered "Your Sweet One," and she asked $500,000 balm when the sweet-ness had deserted and she was left plain "ums."

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

No. No. Troubled!

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 16 years of age and have been going for some time with a boy of about the same age whom I love. I think he returns the sentiment. Would it be all right if I let him kiss me? My girl friends say I shouldn't. TROUBLED."

Your girl friends are right, Troubled. dear! If there is one sure way a girl quickly gets a reputation among boys for being—well, to put it in its ugly form—sporty, it is to be indiscreet in the matter of kissing. Don't do it, dear, and you will never have anything to regret. Also, your circumspect conduct will have a fine and wholesome influence on the boy, you know. Above all, he will be glad that you are the kind of girl he is proud to present to his mother.

"Dear Mise Blake: I am' a young girl of 20 and have been keeping company with a young man of 21 for the last six months steady. We learned to love each other dearly and were of write a verse about it.

POINT IN STRIKE

HOG PRODUCTION IS ALWAYS OVER

United States follows a vicious circle twentieth century are twentieth century are twentieth century are titless to future Valle of successive over and underproduction running usually two years from one streme to the other.

This condition is brought about largely by the fact that the amount of breeding at a given time is mainly determined by the profits made from bors in the preceding year.

Instead of bilindly rushing into hog production when prices are high, and going out of the business when prices are low, it is suggested that better results may be obtained by giving the following fall.

The following fall is conducted to the amount of breeding for the twelve months period ending in the following fall.

A BANK NEVER TRAVELS

INDIVIDUAL Executors are sometimes called out of town on personal business when important estate affairs need their attention. A bank, however, never trave's. When an estate in its charge requires skilled attention, the corporate Executor is always at hand to give it.

This is an important point for consideration when selecting an Executor. Our officers will be glad to answer your inquiries.

Preliminary to having your attorney draw your Will naming your Executor, ask for our booklet, "Memoranda for Will Making."
